Infographic Design Statement

For my infographic piece on the growth and rise of Esports, I chose to portray most of my information towards a rhetorical audience that follows or can learn the development of the young industry. The main purpose I focus on is bringing an informative approach to show how Esport's has its own categories within, and how they affect/correlate with one another to be a foundation to the growth and popularity of the industry. My organization throughout my graphic is separated into different contrasting colors, also separated by blocks showing each margin of information and image/graph. There is also a line that points towards the direction of how the information should be read (in order). The color theme chosen, being purple, is a touch towards it being a very popular and connected color with the Esport industry and video games / streaming in general. My evidence mainly consisted of gathered data across a source that shows the numbers and growth of Esport popularity, the financial aspects such as profits and investments, player earnings, streaming service growth, etc. The images shown onto a data visualization helps the reader understand how the numbers correspond to the information that they can read on a specific margin. More on visualization, the images shown throughout the project are to bring attention to the lively aspect of the sport and competition. Not only does it allow the viewer to see how large these events can be, but also shows what other ways outside services or connections it can have to gain even more attention or bring in a broader audience of gamers and fans alike. I would say that this process has been not very complicated but also not straight forward. I had to first establish to what audience I wanted to approach a more informative take on my topic, instead of trying to persuade them. The information chose stayed very basic to show that there is no “side” to choose from, just to learn from what I spoke on. The main part I had to fix and change on the project, was the coloring, separation of visuals and information, and the cleanliness of the work itself. Other than that, the work and information showed a positive feedback as an informative infographic on the rise of Esports. Seeing how my peer reviews viewed my work, they concluded that the information presented was full throughout and complete. The visuals also caught their attention and provided what was needed to keep the reader in view with my topic. The piece of recommendation I took the most from the two reviews were the fact that I was missing some color contrasting. The original draft had around 4-6 colors in the template, and I tried to follow the original blue hue look, but instead I changed it into a purple contrast for the full thing. It helped since most of my images also had hints of violet and purple. I mostly enjoyed looking at the information for my piece since I myself am interested in Esports competition, so knowing how much of an impact other aspects outside of gaming have affected the growth and enjoyment of competitive video games is astonishing to see.
